

Southern Vales Christian College (SVCC) Submission to the Productivity Commission's Draft Report – Future Foundations for Giving

Introduction

The Productivity Commission's draft report into Philanthropy – Future Foundations for Giving – has provided a range of recommendations in relation to philanthropic giving in Australia and Southern Vales Christian College welcomes the opportunity to provide feedback.

This submission will focus on the recommendation to remove DGR status for school building funds on the basis that there is "the potential for a donor to be able to convert a tax-deductible donation into a private benefit."

We are extremely concerned that the Productivity Commission in its interim report has recommended the removal of Deductible Gift Recipient (DGR) status for School Building Funds and we believe that this action would have a significant negative impact on our community and thousands of others around Australia, and urge the Commission to reconsider.

Southern Vales Christian College currently enrolls 520 students and employs 110 teachers and other staff. The College contributes to the social and economic life of the southern suburbs of Adelaide across its two campuses located in Morphett Vale and Aldinga.

Schools as not for profit entities

Like the majority of non-government schools in Australia, Southern Vales Christian College is a not-for-profit entity, registered with the Australian Charities and Not-for-Profits Commission (ACNC) with the charitable purpose of 'advancing education'. This recognition of the importance and public benefit of the work of schools in educating Australia's young people underpins the DGR status of the school building fund at our College and other schools around Australia.

The importance of building funds for schools

Across Australia, independent school families, alumni and communities collectively contribute 86 per cent of school capital income nationally. Two-thirds of independent schools receive no government funding for capital expenditure. In many schools, 100 per cent of capital funding is sourced from parents and school communities.

In 2021, the value of this contribution from Australian independent school families, alumni and communities was around $1.14 billion for school building and capital works. These same families contribute around $5.7 billion annually to the ongoing costs of educating their children, with their after-tax dollars.

The College is planning to undertake a significant building program over the next 10 years and plans to utilise its School Building Fund for fundraising with parents and local businesses towards this endeavour.

Private Benefit

The Productivity Commission has argued in its report that in the case of school building funds, there is “the potential for a donor to be able to convert a tax-deductible donation into a private benefit is especially apparent for primary and secondary education, particularly where students are charged fees.”

However, the Productivity Commission has shown no real evidence to support its argument that there is a material risk of tax-deductible donations to school building funds being converted into a private benefit.

School Building Funds support capital works programs and develop assets with a life that extends far beyond the 13 years a child spends at school. Further, it is not only the families of current students that contribute to school building funds, but alumni, community groups, and others through a range of fundraising activities. It is extremely unlikely that a member of the community, or a school alumnus – who may have left the school many years ago – could benefit directly from these donations.

And while the draft report raised the possibility of there being a link between donations and fees charged for education services, this is not the case in schools. Capital works are funded separately to the recurrent operating costs that are recouped through fees, and deductible donations to a School Building Fund therefore do not materially reduce the fees payable by parents.

Impact of the removal of DGR status for school building funds

Removing DGR status for non-government school building funds will shift more financial burden onto families, who already make significant sacrifices to support their children’s education and are doing their best to manage the ever-increasing cost of living pressures.

For Southern Vales Christian College, the removal of DGR status for school building funds will directly impact the capacity of the College to provide the best possible learning environment for our students.

Conclusion

Southern Vales Christian College does not support the Productivity Commission’s recommendation to withdraw DGR status from school building funds and is concerned about the very detrimental impact it could have on the provision of quality education nationally.

On behalf of our students, families and the wider College community we ask that the Commission reconsider this recommendation.

Thank you for your consideration of this submission.

Yours sincerely
